Technological advancements can help everybody, but there are some things that could be particularly beneficial for the visually-impaired community — if only the innovators knew how. Perkins School for the Blind in Watertown wants to help connect these creators to the blind community. The school recently partnered with Aira, a company that connects the visually impaired with a virtual assistant, who can act as the person's eyes to provide help. NEW TRUMP BUDGET CUTS DOMESTIC PROGRAMS

1 President Donald Trump proposed a budget on Monday that calls for cuts in domestic programs and seeks a sharp increase in military spending and funding for a wall on the Mexican border. Presidential budgets are rarely enacted by the Congress, which controls federal purse strings, but they allow the White House to lay out its priorities for the year. The plan calls for deep cuts in nonmilitary spending that would lower the federal budget deficit by more than $3 trillion over 10 years. But those cuts fly in the face of a two-year budget deal passed last week by Congress that raised spending limits on both military and domestic programs by $300 billion. The Trump budget also calls for overhauling Medicare and Medicaid, two government-funded healthcare programs that are widely popular. have to be approved by Congress.

TOP DIPLOMAT URGES ACTION ON HARASSMENT

2 Secretary of State Rex Tillerson on Monday urged department employees to intervene if they witness sexual harassment, two days after President Donald Trump expressed sympathy for those accused of harassment and not given due process. "There is no form of disrespect for the individual that I can identify, anything more demeaning than for someone to suffer this kind of treatment," he said. "It's not OK if you're seeing it happening and just look away. You must do something. You must notify someone. You must step in and intervene," Tillerson added, speaking in Cairo to about 150 U.S. embassy staff outside the ambassador's residence. Tillerson's comments came amid a chorus of sexual misconduct accusations against powerful men in media, business and politics that in recent days has reached top aides in the White House.

5 THINGS YOU NEED TO KNOW

SENATE TO FINALLY DEBATE IMMIGRATION

4 The Senate was to begin a major, free-for-all immigration debate, its first in nearly five years, on Monday evening that could decide the fate of 700,000 Dreamer immigrants, young people brought into the country illegally years ago as children. Under an order issued last year by President Donald Trump, the Dreamers could be deported after March 5, a deadline that will loom behind the rare Senate debate, in which no single bill will be the centerpiece and a range of ideas will be in play. By forcing the deadline on Congress with his September order, Trump drove a sharp wedge between Democrats and Republicans on an emotionally charged issue. Despite last week's enactment of a bipartisan budget deal, it was unclear if any immigration bill could cross the Senate's 60-vote hurdle, let alone pass the more conservative House.

INVESTORS STARTING TO LOOK ABROAD

5 The worst week in the U.S. stock market in two years and benchmark 10-year Treasury yields hitting four-year highs are prompting fund managers to rethink their allocation plans. Among their new plays: international bonds, emerging market stocks and cash. All look poised to gain as investors assess the consequences of more fiscal stimulus as the Federal Reserve prepares to raise interest rates. "This is unchartered territory," said Kirk Hartman, global chief investment officer at Wells Fargo Asset Management. The turmoil stems from a tug-of-war between monetary and fiscal policies: The Federal Reserve, which is mandated to keep inflation low, and U.S. fiscal policy, which is adding stimulus with a $1.5 trillion Republican tax cut and an extra $300 billion over two years in federal spending.

Perkins welcomes virtual assistance technology at Watertown campus

With Aira, Kim Charlson can call up an agent who sees what she sees, and help her read print, navigate or do other visual tasks. PERKINS SCHOOL FOR THE BLIND/DAVID GORDON

Perkins School for the Blind is the first to collaborate with Aira, a technology that helps the visually impaired community.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

On a recent night, Kim Charlson and her husband wanted to take an inventory of their downstairs freezer. It's something everybody has to do, Charlson said, but because they're blind, the chore is a bit tricky.

Though the couple has labeled their frozen food with Braille, Charlson can read only two or three items before "finger freeze" sets in, she said, and her fingertips become too numb to read the Braille.

Luckily, Charlson has what is essentially a virtual assistant. Through Aira, a technology that combines augmented reality and artificial intelligence, Charlson can call an agent who acts as her eyes.

Aira uses glasses and a smartphone app to aid blind or visually impaired people, looking through the cameras to see their points of view and provide verbal help.

The company has collaborated with the Perkins School for the Blind in Watertown, making the technology available free to anyone on campus. Users can request navigational support, help with classroom tasks, read any mail that comes by paper, rather than digitally or anything they can think to ask for.

"Aira is like having a sighted person in your pocket. You can ask them a question at any time and they'll have time for you," Charlson said. "Your imagination is the boundary. … I'm finding that it's only limited by the things you can think to ask the service to do."

Charlson is part of a pilot for Aira (and did get an inventory of her freezer, thanks to an Aira agent) and helped bring the system to Perkins' campus. She works at the school as the executive director of the Perkins Library, an accessible public library for anyone in Massachusetts who can't read print.

> "Aira is like having a sighted person in your pocket, you can ask them a question at any time and they'll have time for you."
> Kim Charlson

Though Charlson said the freezer example was a bit silly, it was a part of her life that Aira made easier. That ability to have visually-impaired people test technology and find uses others may not think of is really important, said Dave Power, president and CEO at Perkins.

A lot of technical advancements, like AI and machine-learning, can uniquely benefit the visually impaired community, but only if the people creating the tech think about those applications.

"The applications of this amazing technology don't naturally make it all the way to solve the problems of people who are blind and visually impaired, unless there's a way to connect those dots," Power said. "We think Perkins can play that role of connecting innovators with the blind community."

BPD faces backlash for Black History Month tweet that honored a white man

The Boston Police Department has since deleted a tweet in which it honored Red Auerbach, a white former Boston Celtics coach, for Black History Month.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

The BPD is facing criticism after its Twitter account honored a white man for Black History Month.

The department's original tweet, now deleted, was sent out Sunday and honored previous Celtics coach Red Auerbach, a white man, for being the first NBA coach to draft an African-American basketball player in 1950.

The tweet also honored Auerbach for fielding "an all African-American starting five in 1964 and [hiring] the league's 1st African-American head coach (Bill Russell) in 1966," according to screenshots posted on Twitter.

The tweet has been deleted, and the department sent another Black History Month tweet Sunday night, this time paying tribute to Bill Russell. Russell played center for the Celtics and later became first African-American head coach of any major American sport.

> "[It was] completely inappropriate and a gross misrepresentation of how we are honoring Black History Month in Boston."
> Mayor Marty Walsh

Many who caught the first tweet before it was deleted responded to this second Black History Month tribute with screenshots of the original tweet mentioning Auerbach. People called the initial tweet "embarrassing" and "tone deaf."

Around midnight, the department apologized for the tweet.

"BPD realizes that an earlier tweet may have offended some and we apologize for that," the department tweeted. "Our intentions were never to offend. It has been taken down."

Mayor Marty Walsh also commented on the tweet, saying in a statement that it was "completely inappropriate and a gross misrepresentation of how we are honoring Black History Month in Boston."

Obama jokes about ears, gray hair as portrait unveiled

Former President Barack Obama joked about his ears and gray hair and praised his wife Michelle Obama's "hotness" at the unveiling of the couple's official portraits at the Smithsonian's National Portrait Gallery on Monday.

The Obamas tapped artists Kehinde Wiley and Amy Sherald for the paintings, which will be added to the National Portrait Gallery's collection of presidential portraits.

Wiley and Sherald were the first black artists commissioned to paint a president or first lady for the Smithsonian.

For his portrait by Wiley, Obama is depicted sitting in a brown chair with a backdrop of bright green leaves and colorful flowers. Michelle Obama's painting shows her sitting with one hand under her chin and the other draped across her lap, while wearing a long flowing dress decorated with geometric shapes.

Obama, the first African-American U.S. president, complimented Sherald for her portrait of Michelle.

"I want to thank you for so spectacularly capturing the grace and beauty and intelligence and charm and hotness of the woman that I love," Obama said.

He quipped that Wiley, who painted his portrait, was at a disadvantage because his subject was "less becoming."

"I tried to negotiate less gray hair and Kehinde's artistic integrity would not allow him to do what I asked," Obama said. "I tried to negotiate smaller ears — struck out on that as well."

The Obamas both expressed awe at their portraits, noting that they were the first people in their families to sit for an official painting.

Michelle Obama said she hoped the portrait would have an impact on young girls of color.

"They will look up and they will see an image of someone who looks like them, hanging on the wall of this great American institution," she said. "I know the kind of impact that will have on their lives, because I was one of those girls."

The Portrait Gallery's tradition of commissioning presidential portraits began with President George H.W. Bush. Other portraits were acquired as gifts, bought at auctions or through other means. REUTERS

The cost of taking a 'victory lap'

Why taking a fifth year to finish your degree might not be such a great idea.

PAT KING
patrick.king@metro.us

It's OK not to have your sh-t together when you first head off to college. After all, you're still just a kid trying to figure out this big world. This is why so many students take an extra year to finish their four-year degree with what many call a "victory lap."

But with so much talk about the student debt crisis these days, how much can taking an extra year to earn your degree add to your running balance with banks and student loan providers? According to a study published by the Lending Tree, titled "The Victory Lap," taking an extra year may help students balance campus life and their studies at a reasonable pace, but the added cost can be more than most students bargain for in the long run.

The study found that taking five years to graduate may cost a student "between $29,000 (for in-state public tuition) and $52,000 a year (for private tuition) in principal and interest over the life of a typical student loan." This amount will increase drastically for students who are paying out-of-state tuition.

The study also shows that the highest rate of students taking these "victory laps" has been found at schools with larger graduating classes. "Schools with 30,000-40,000 students have the highest rates of fifth-year seniors," the study says, "with 20.6% of students taking five years to graduate. Schools with 2,000-5,000 students have an average of 10.6% of students graduating in the fifth year."

The study found that only 10.2% of undergraduate students from smaller private schools feel the need to take an extra year to earn their degrees, compared with 16.3% of public-school undergraduates.

In fact, the top five schools with the highest percentages of students graduating in five years are all public schools.

This could mean that students attending a school with an overwhelmingly large graduating class risk losing focus on their studies and may need to take a "victory lap" to complete your studies — you could be adding more to your already-mounting student debt.

Time means money. No, really. The more time you spend at school the more it will cost you. ISTOCK

Rafe Spall taking on the supernatural in "The Ritual," out on Netflix now. NETFLIX

'The Ritual' is the Netflix horror film you should be watching

Director David Bruckner on adapting the book for the screen.

GREGORY WAKEMAN
Gregory.Wakeman@metro.us

Taking a shortcut in a horror movie is always a prelude to disaster. Especially when it's through a forest that just happens to be haunted by a Nordic god.

That's exactly what happens in Netflix's latest, "The Ritual," in which four friends find themselves battling the supernatural as they just try to find their way through the trees and back to safety.

Based on Adam Nevill's 2011 book of the same name, "The Ritual" is evocative and increasingly haunting, but it isn't completely faithful to its source material.

Over the phone, director David Bruckner says it wasn't an easy book to adapt — especially because the media are inherently different.

"The experience of the book is very much in Luke's head," Bruckner says. "The nature of the prose means that you could wander into that, his memories, and what he was like with these guys when they were younger.

"That's juxtaposed against the life-and-death survival that the guys are going through," he continues. "The experience of the book oscillates back and forth between the memory of their friendship and their current experience.

"To do that in the movie probably would have been too arthouse, and the momentum of the story would have been challenged by that amount of backstory."

GETTY IMAGES

"I thought it was reasonable to rob a store with a cricket bat. They told me that would be funny in all of the wrong ways."

Bruckner, who says the influences on the film range from "Deliverance," "Predator" and "Wicker Man" to Ben Wheatley and Steven Spielberg, made these alterations to make sure that the narrative was always driving forward.

"So we set out to create an event on the front end of the movie that the audience could experience, then that would charge the group of friends with a similar problem," Bruckner says. "The book was very much how Luke's friends had lost faith in him and this was a different way to do it."

Not all of Bruckner's suggestions were received so positively. Admitting there was a bit of a culture gap, Bruckner points out that he was still an American trying to tell the story of four British friends lost in the woods.

"I loved the banter of the script, the way that they joke amongst themselves," he says. "But I had a lot of help from the actors and producers developing it.

"A lot of times I would come up with an idea and everyone would shake their heads at me, and say, 'You can't do that, mate.' I thought it was reasonable to rob a store with a cricket bat. They told me that would be funny in all of the wrong ways."

Rebecca Hall insists 'Holmes and Watson' will be 'ridiculous'

In a good way, though!

GREGORY WAKEMAN
Gregory.Wakeman@metro.us

Will Ferrell and John C. Reilly star as the literary icons GETTY IMAGES

It's a travesty that it's now been a decade since we last saw Will Ferrell and John C. Reilly lead a comedy together.

Thankfully, that pain will subside later this year with the release of "Holmes and Watson," which will hilariously (no doubt) reunite the pair for a third time, following the success of 2005's "Talladega Nights: The Ballad of Ricky Bobby" and 2008's "Step Brothers."

John C. Reilly will play the Dr. Watson to Will Ferrell's Holmes, and Rebecca Hall is involved in the comedy, too.

GETTY

Metro recently caught up with the British actress to discuss her role in "Permission," but we were able to squeeze some inside info on "H&W" during our conversation — during which she may have accidentally shared the first (inside) joke we can expect from the big screen release?

"Well, I play Grace Hart, an American doctor that comes to England as an autopsy specialist — which is ironic given that all the Americans are playing British people," she quips.

Unfortunately, Hall failed to reveal whether the other British actors in the film, which includes Kelly Macdonald, Ralph Fiennes and Hugh Laurie, will also be adopting American accents in the film, too. Let's hope so, though, because otherwise that's just a waste of a solid gag.

Hall predicts that "Holmes and Watson" will be "ridiculous" in the best possible way, which is exactly what we want from a Ferrell/Reilly vehicle.

"I haven't seen the film, so I'm still slightly in the dark," Hall admits. "But it was extraordinarily funny, and silly to make, so I can't believe it won't be the same to watch. I think it's going to be ridiculous, really — in a good way!"

We'll find out if that's the case (haha) when "Holmes and Watson" is released on Dec. 21.

Those of you pining to see Hall on screen long before then can enjoy "Permission," which has just been released On Demand.

Seth MacFarlane slams Boston city councilor over 'SMILF' comments

The "Family Guy" creator weighed in on the controversy.

MATT JUUL
matthew.juul@metro.us

Seth MacFarlane tweeted his support for Frankie Shaw's South Boston-set show "SMILF" over the weekend.

On Sunday, the "Family Guy" creator and New England native slammed City Councilor Ed Flynn for his recent comments about the Golden Globe-nominated series. Flynn wrote in a Facebook post last week that advertisments around the city for "SMILF" should be taken down, saying that many of his constituents view the show as "a degrading, crude and inaccurate portrayal" of people from the neighborhood.

"I'm tired of Hollywood making a profit off of these abysmal shows that in no way capture the real lives, character and contributions of the people of South Boston," Flynn wrote. "As a result, I reached out to officials from the City of Boston and they have kindly agreed to remove these advertisements."

MacFarlane defended the Showtime series in a Twitter post criticizing Flynn's remarks.

"Flynn treads on dark ground," MacFarlane wrote. "Whether a writer is drawing from personal experience or pure imagination, it's troubling when anyone, politician or otherwise, suggests a story should not be told or a character should be censored. Make room, Ed."

The filmmaker and actor was also mentioned in a lengthy post by Shaw responding to Flynn's comments over the weekend. The Boston native, who created and stars in "SMILF," took issue with the city councilor's assessment of the series, which she believes comes "from underlying gender-bias more than anything else."

Frankie Shaw is the creator and star of "SMILF." MARK SCHAFER/SHOWTIME

"These deep-seated unconscious judgements are centuries old and very hard to recognize," Shaw wrote. "But just like Ben Affleck and Seth MacFarlane, who came into town to make their very male art of chasing women, robbing banks, and getting high with teddy bears, I'd like the same consideration to tell the stories that are important to me."

As for the series' controversial title, Shaw said in her response that it's "an attempt to reclaim a terrible term, a term that men use to categorize women."

"What's clear is that I'm telling a personal story about a woman who loves her kid and is also burdened by her circumstances of being a single mom, a survivor of childhood sexual abuse, and living in a neighborhood she and her own mom can no longer afford," Shaw wrote. "And if you don't know what to tell the kids about the title's meaning, you can say what my cousin Jess tells her kids: 'It's a word that is degrading to women and Frankie is trying to use it in a feminist way.'"

You don't need to travel all the way to New Orleans in order to party for Mardi Gras. While Bostonians usually don't go all out for the holiday like the folks down in the Big Easy, there's still plenty of Fat Tuesday fun to be had in the city. Here are five ways to celebrate Mardi Gras around Boston today.

The Barking Crab

Fill up on New Orleans-style seafood at this Seaport restaurant. Guests will be able to feast on a Cajun crawfish jambalaya special ($27), which will be available for lunch and dinner. The Barking Crab will also have a "Carnival Punch" drink special ($31), made with pineapple-infused vodka, pomegranate juice, lemon juice, ginger beer and topped with a lemon twist. Parties of two or more people will be able enjoy the N'awlins-themed fish bowl.
88 Sleeper St., barkingcrab.com

Beat Brasserie

Between 4 p.m. and midnight\), guests will be able to enjoy Cajun cuisine and Mardi Gras cocktails, plus live music, at this celebration in Harvard Square. Beat Brasserie executive chef James Lyons has prepared a special a la carte menu that can be paired with New Orleans-style drinks made with Berkshire Mountain Distillers, such as the frozen mint julep, featuring whiskey and fresh mint leaves, or the "Cocktail à la Louisiane," made with rye and absinthe.
13 Brattle St., Cambridge, beatbrasserie.com

Glass House

This Cambridge restaurant is bringing the magic of Bourbon Street to Kendall Square. Head to Glass House between 4:30 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. for all kinds of Fat Tuesday goodies, including the "Muffuletta Deviled Eggs, Shrimp + Grits," made with shrimp étouffée and Geechie Boy mill grits, or the Cajun-style fish tacos, featuring pan-blackened catfish, remoulade and grilled corn salsa. Don't forget to munch on beignets for dessert.
450 Kendall St., Cambridge, glasshousecambridge.com

South Street Diner

Celebrate Mardi Gras all day at South Street Diner. Chow down on an all-you-can-eat jambalaya feast ($7), as well as plenty of other Lousiana-style grub like crawfish boils, alligator sausage, fried frog legs, king cake and more. The diner will also be handing out beads and serving up "Voodoo Punch" cocktails ($9).
178 Kneeland St., southstreetdiner.com

Enjoy a crawfish boil at Sweet Cheeks Q. PROVIDED

Sweet Cheeks Q

From 5 p.m. to close, fill up on crawfish at this fan-favorite Fenway restaurant. Owner Tiffani Faison and executive chef Dan Raia are serving up a traditional boil ($40 per person) featuring fresh crawfish straight from Louisiana. The meal comes with gulf shrimp, andouille sausage, new potatoes and corn on the cob, plus seafood gumbo and king cake. Guests can also sip on hurricanes and Mardi Gras-inspired cocktails.

How to beat erectile dysfunction

The founders of Roman want to help men get tackle ED. The telehealth app is currently available in Boston, NY, FL, PA, WA, and CA.

wellbeing

Telehealth platform Roman, which helps men get diagnosed with and receive treatment for ED, is now available in Boston.

KATE MOONEY
kate.mooney@metro.us

Erectile dysfunction isn't just an issue that befalls older men. The condition, defined by the National Institutes of Health as the inability to "get or keep an erection firm enough for satisfactory sexual intercourse," affects 30 million men every year. And while the risk of the condition does increase with age — with 40 percent of men affected at age 40, and 70 percent at age 70, according to the Cleveland Clinic — a 2013 study published in The Journal of Sexual Medicine found that one in four men seeking treatment for ED were under 40 years old.

Causes of erectile dysfunction

ED has several causes, from health-related lifestyle factors like anxiety, drinking, smoking or obesity to side effects from medications like antidepressants and blood-pressure pills. It can also be an indicator of a more serious medical condition, including diabetes, heart disease and prostate cancer.

The stigma gets in the way of seeking treatment. Men, already half as likely as women to go to the doctor in a two-year period, according to a 2014 CDC survey, are ashamed to discuss the issue with their primary-care doctor, or even pick up meds at the pharmacy. According to a study from the Southern Illinois University School of Medicine, only 25 percent of men who received an ED diagnosis filled a prescription for it.

What ED means for men's health

"The strength of a man's erection is a really great indicator for their overall health," explains Zachariah Reitano, the co-founder of Roman, a telehealth app that evaluates and treats men for ED and is now available in Boston. "It requires so much of your body at one time — your hormones, your nervous system, your heart."

He likens ED to having your check-engine light on: a visibly recognizable sign that something's not right.

With Roman, Reitano and his co-founders, Rob Schutz and Saman Rahmanian, want to help fight the stigma around the condition and get men treated for it.

Reitano suffers from ED himself, first experiencing it at the age of 17, when it turned out to be the sign of a heart condition. Then the medication he received to treat his condition gave him ED as a side effect. The now 26-year-old considers himself Roman's first customer.

How Roman works

For $15, patients complete an online visit, providing medical history and answering questions about their symptoms, followed by a consultation from a physician. Upon reviewing the patient's profile, if the doctor determines it's "safe and appropriate," he or she will prescribe ED medication — oral pde5 inhibitors, including Viagra and its generic, Sildenafil; Cialis; and Levitra, ranging from $2 to $62 a dose — and ship it in discreet packaging. In some cases, they might find a patient unsuitable for telehealth and instead direct him to a doctor's office.

Reitano describes Roman's services as a complement to medical care, rather than a replacement. He hopes the app will encourage men to take charge of their health and not shy away from regular doctor's visits. And he acknowledges it takes more than medication to solve ED.

"It's analogous to a knee brace," he explains. "You might need it each time to walk. It costs money and it by no mean fixes your knee." But it's the first step to getting your sexual health back.

Health-care industry to gain 4 million jobs by 2026

Home health-care services is a booming sector, and a safe bet for the future. ISTOCK

With so much projected growth in the economy, many experts are predicting which industries will see job expansion in the coming years.

As it turns out, looking for work in the health-care industry could be one your best bets.

In a report published by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, the health-care industry is projected to gain 4 million jobs by 2026. Close to quarter of these will be in home health-care services.

In the same report, the BLS projected the U.S. would see 11.5 million new jobs created by that date — which means 35% of all newly created jobs will be in the health-care industry.

According to a separate report, released by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) in 2013, the growth in the population of aging Americans is the key factor behind this increase. The CDC says by 2030 "older adults will account for roughly 20% of the U.S. population."

This statistic has many worried about the future and programs like the Affordable Care Act. More than 500,000 health-care jobs were added to our economy in 2017 alone.

So now that we know how much this industry is expected to grow, how lucrative are these jobs?

According to the bureau's findings, in 2016 the median salary for health-care practitioners and other medically related technical occupations (nurses, surgeons, dental hygienists, etc.) was around $63,000 annually, which was close to double the median salary of all other occupations of that year.

Home health-care positions, on the other hand, had a median annual salary of under $30,000. That said, as need increases, salaries are expected to follow suit.

So if you are looking to change careers and jump into an industry with a high level of job security, health care seems like a very safe bet, with earnings and openings on the rise.

It's clear by now, the B's are elite

The Bruins continue to rack up the wins and are proving to be a resilient group.

Patrice Bergeron has registered 49 points so far this season. GETTY IMAGES

By any measure, 54 regular season games is enough of a sample size to get a fair read on an NHL team. Therefore, thus far in the 2017-18 campaign you have to conclude that the Bruins (34-12-8) are one of the top teams in the NHL.

Boston has the second best record in the NHL, tied with Vegas (36-15-4) and is three points behind Tampa Bay (38-14-3), but keep in mind that they still have a game in hand on both of those clubs. The Bruins also possess the second best goal-differential in the league (plus-49), trailing only Tampa Bay (plus-53). They have been great at TD Garden (18-7-4) and they have the best road record (16-5-4), so what else do you need to know?

Not just around New England, but most of the hockey world has been caught by surprise with how well the Bruins have performed this season. Many are starting to take notice though as the B's have been ranked No. 1 in some power rankings around the country and whenever the top clubs are debated about, they are always one of the first teams to be mentioned — and for good reason.

Head coach Bruce Cassidy's team (Cassidy is an amazing 52-20-9 in his first 81 games in charge of the Black and Gold) has demonstrated its quality when you look at their resiliency. After Anaheim snapped the B's 18-game point streak with a 3-1 defeat on Jan. 30, they responded with four straight wins in which they allowed a combined five goals.

Saturday's 4-2 no-show loss to the dreadful Sabres (16-30-10) was stunning, but the Bruins bounced right back the following night with a satisfying 5-3 win in New Jersey (27-20-8).

"We're getting production up and down the lineup," noted Cassidy after Sunday night's victory. "If they shut down our top guys, then someone else contributes and that's been a hallmark of our group. They like to pick each other up."

Along with what many regard as the best forward line in hockey: left wing Brad Marchand (21 goals, 32 assists), center Patrice Bergeron (25 goals, 24 assists) and right wing David Pastrnak (21 goals, 30 assists), Boston's other real notable feature is what could be the best goaltender tandem in the NHL. Starter Tuukka Rask (22-9-4, 2.11 goals against average, .924 save percentage and 2 shutouts) and backup Anton Khudobin's (12-3-4, 2.32 goals against average, .925 save percentage and 1 shutout) numbers speak for themselves. Unlike most other teams, there is not much of a drop-off between the starer and backup and this allows Cassidy to have the utmost confidence that Khudobin can beat quality teams. Khudobin allowed three goals against the Devils but was still strong in net as he made 35 saves, including Travis Zajac's penalty shot.

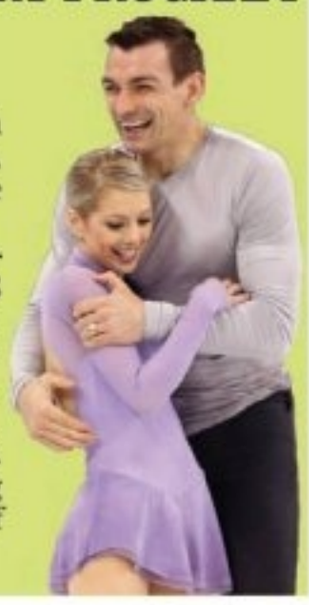
Unlike in past years where the B's have stressed until the final day of the regular season just about making the playoffs, they should have the luxury this spring of clinching their spot way ahead of time. Rask will be more rested than he normally is by that point in the season, which can only be a good thing for a team that legitimately has dreams of another Stanley Cup Final run. Boston hosts former BC star Johnny Gaudreau (18 goals, 48 assists), former Bruin Dougie Hamilton (9 goals, 20 assists) and Calgary (29-19-8) on Tuesday (7, NESN) before heading out on a five-game road trip that will have them out of town until Feb. 25.

The road ahead

The Bruins will host Calgary (29-19-8) tonight at the Garden (7 p.m., NESN) before a two-week road trip up north. On Saturday, the B's will play at Vancouver and then will take on Calgary, Edmonton and Toronto next week. The Maple Leafs game should be particularly intriguing as Toronto is right on the B's heels in the Eastern Conference standings.

What to watch at the Winter Olympics tonight

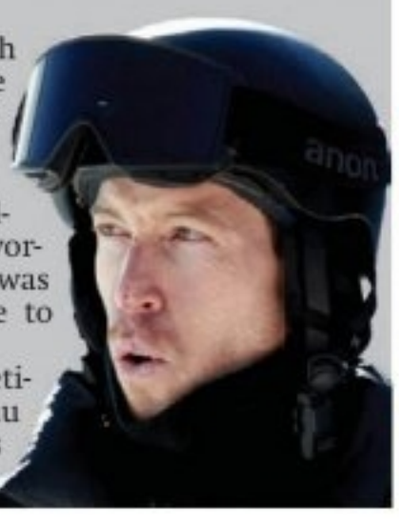
FIGURE SKATING
PAIR SKATING SHORT PROGRAM



With 22 duos set to take part in the pair skating short program, the United States has just one couple in the mix.

ALEXA SCIMECA KNIERIM and her husband, CHRIS KNIERIM, are fresh off winning a bronze medal in the team event where they competed in the same discipline, the pair skating short program. They finished fourth among 10 participants with a score of 69.75.

SNOWBOARDING
MEN'S HALFPIPE FINAL



Entering his fourth Olympic Games, the long-time face of American snowboarding is still a favorite to medal in Pyeongchang. Especially because the event's favorite, Iouri Podladtchikov, was forced to withdraw due to injury.

He'll have stiff competition from Japan's Ayumu Hirano and Australia's Scotty James.

ALPINE SKIING
WOMEN'S SLALOM FINAL

MIKAELA SHIFFRIN finally will get an opportunity to kick her 2018 Games off after the giant slalom was postponed due to high winds and harsh conditions.

Now, one of the world's best skiers will lead off with her strongest event in the slalom, which she took gold in during the 2014 Winter Games in Sochi along with three world titles.

Vitamin B1 (Thiamine) After Cardiac Arrest Study

Learn about this post cardiac arrest study that may affect you or someone you know.

Cardiac arrest is an emergency condition in which your heart and breathing stop, requiring cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) to restart the heart. Sudden cardiac arrest affects approximately 300,000 people annually in the U.S.

Thiamine After Cardiac Arrest (THACA) is an emergency medicine research study designed to determine if Vitamin B1 (Thiamine) can improve survival and prevent brain injury in patients who have had a cardiac arrest. There are currently no medications known to have a beneficial effect on post-arrest outcome, and brain injury and death are very common. Vitamin B1 deficiency is not uncommon after cardiac arrest, and deficiency is known to cause brain injury in other settings. This research study is taking place at Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center and will last for approximately 4-5 years. Participants who are brought to the hospital after a cardiac arrest and are enrolled in this study will be randomly assigned to receive Vitamin B1 or placebo (no active medication) for two days after suffering a cardiac arrest.

Because of the importance of administering Vitamin B1 (Thiamine) as soon as possible after cardiac arrest in order to maximize the chance of finding a benefit, this study will be conducted under exception from informed consent (EFIC) in accordance with the federal Food and Drug Administration (FDA) regulations. EFIC is allowed only when testing possible treatments for life-threatening conditions for which there is no alternative proven treatment, when obtaining consent is not possible because the study treatment must be administered quickly and a legally authorized representative of the patient is not present or reachable.

When legally authorized representatives are available to provide consent, research staff will obtain consent prior to enrollment. For participants enrolled under EFIC, they or their representatives will be notified of enrollment as soon as possible and asked if they would like to continue participation, with the option to withdraw from the study at any time.

The purpose of this handout is to notify our community about this study and to provide contact information and resources where you can learn more. If you do not wish to be a participant in this study, please visit the website below or call the number listed below to find out how you can opt out. Individuals who opt out will be sent a bracelet and the study team will maintain a list of these induvial to ensure they are not enrolled under EFIC.

MORTGAGEE'S NOTICE OF SALE OF REAL ESTATE

By virtue and in execution of the Power of Sale contained in a certain Mortgage given by Angelo Rossi and Kelly Rossi to New Century Mortgage Corporation, dated March 22, 2006 and recorded with the Suffolk County Registry of Deeds at Book 39274, Page 223, as affected by a Loan Modification recorded in said Registry of Deeds at Book 48256, Page 151, and as further affected by a Loan Modification recorded in said Registry of Deeds at Book 52256, Page 1 subsequently assigned to U.S. Bank National Association as Trustee for Citigroup Mortgage Loan Trust, Inc. 2006-NC1, Asset-Backed Pass-Through Certificates Series 2006-NC1 by New Century Mortgage Corporation by assignment recorded in said Suffolk County Registry of Deeds at Book 45746, Page 323; of which Mortgage the undersigned is the present holder for breach of the conditions of said Mortgage and for the purpose of foreclosing same will be sold at Public Auction at 12:00 PM on February 27, 2018 at 25 Johnswood Road, Boston (Roslindale), MA, all and singular the premises described in said Mortgage,

TO WIT:

The land with the buildings thereon numbered 25 Johnswood Road in the part of Boston called Roslindale, County of Suffolk, Commonwealth of Massachusetts, bounded and described as follows: SOUTHEASTERLY: on Johnswood Road by two lines, forty-one and 05/100 (41.05) feet by a straight line, and thirty-nine and 72/100 (39.72) feet by a convex curved line drawn with a radius of six hundred fifty-three and 54/100 (653.54) feet; SOUTHEASTERLY: on land now or late of land of Henry M. Whitney and shown as lot 27 on a plan hereinafter mentioned, sixty-seven and 24/100 (67.24) feet; NORTHWESTERLY: on lot numbered 14 on said plan, eighty and 26/100 (80.26) feet; NORTHEASTERLY: on other land now or late of said Whitney and shown on said plan as lot 25, sixty-two and 65/100 (62.65) feet. Containing 5227 square feet more or less and being shown as lot number 26 on a "Plan of land belonging to Amanda Blakemore on Mount Prospect Roslindale, Mass." and recorded with Suffolk Deeds, Book 2359, Page 1. Deed Reference: 18520/177.

Upon information and belief there is a scriveners error in the legal description attached to the insured Mortgage wherein property is shown on Plan Book 2359 Page 128

The premises are to be sold subject to and with the benefit of all easements, restrictions, building and zoning laws, liens, attorney's fees and costs pursuant to M.G.L.Ch.183A, unpaid taxes, tax titles, water bills, municipal liens and assessments, rights of tenants and parties in possession.

TERMS OF SALE:

A deposit of FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS AND 00 CENTS ($5,000.00) in the form of a certified check, bank treasurer's check or money order will be required to be delivered at or before the time the bid is offered. The successful bidder will be required to execute a Foreclosure Sale Agreement immediately after the close of the bidding. The balance of the purchase price shall be paid within thirty (30) days from the sale date in the form of a certified check, bank treasurer's check or other check satisfactory to Mortgagee's attorney. The Mortgagee reserves the right to bid at the sale, to reject any and all bids, to continue the sale and to amend the terms of the sale by written or oral announcement made before or during the foreclosure sale. If the sale is set aside for any reason, the Purchaser at the sale shall be entitled only to a return of the deposit paid. The purchaser shall have no further recourse against the Mortgagor, the Mortgagee or the Mortgagee's attorney. The description of the premises contained in said mortgage shall control in the event of an error in this publication. TIME WILL BE OF THE ESSENCE.

Other terms if any, to be announced at the sale.

Aries Making an impulsive decision in an emotional situation will lead to regret. Wait to see how things unfold before you make promises or take action. Know your boundaries.

Taurus Evaluate partnerships carefully to equalize your position without upsetting a relationship. Change can be good when it enhances what you are trying to achieve.

Gemini Business trips, meetings and negotiating on your own behalf are favored. Present what you have to offer, but don't embellish the results you are hoping to achieve.

Cancer Take a practical path. Trying to do the impossible will leave you looking bad. Using what you already have and being resourceful and budget-conscious will be rewarded.

Leo Get work responsibilities out of the way without complaint to avoid criticism. Gauge time spent and make sure you are receiving enough in return to make it worth your while.

Virgo Don't let confusion lead to a messy argument. Listen carefully and follow instructions to avoid making a mistake. Hard work and diligence will pay off.

Libra Use your intelligence to convince others to recognize the value in what you are trying to do. Don't back down when you should be moving forward.

Scorpio It will be difficult to hide your emotions. Try not to get upset by what others do or say. Focus on creative endeavors and personal changes. Accept the inevitable.

Sagittarius Look over personal papers and make sure everything is in order. New tax credits should be looked at carefully. Stick to rules and regulations to avoid problems.

Capricorn Fraternize with people who can help you get ahead. Don't be afraid to be different or to offer a perspective that will make others engage in your conversation.

Aquarius Refrain from getting involved in someone else's plans. Overspending or trying to keep up with your neighbors or friends is not favored. Live within your means.

Pisces Impulsive behavior will not serve you well. Wait-and-see about deals that sound too good to be true. Know what you are up against before you argue. EUGENIA LAST
